Basic Utility Rates

Effective Jan. 1, 2007

We take seriously our responsibility to provide reliable energy and control costs. Before setting new rates, the Public Service Commission of Wisconsin reviews our rate request and listens to customers and MGE.

Why are MGE electric prices going down?

Natural gas prices impact your electric bill. The demand for cleaner electric power has made natural gas a key part of electricity's fuel mix.

The new electric rate is lower because of a drop in natural gas supply prices. In recent years, MGE has increased electric rates to pay for new infrastructure (power plants, substations, etc.) to reliably meet our customers' growing energy demands. The retreat from last year's high natural gas supply prices has offset these new infrastructure costs.

Why are MGE natural gas rates unchanged?

Natural gas distribution service rates cover gas system maintenance and the costs to deliver gas to your home. They are independent of gas supply prices. Supply prices (found under gas sales service rates) may go up or down with monthly market fluctuations. The current lower gas supply costs will be reflected on your bill. These prices are filed monthly with the Public Service Commission.

Visit mge.com for more information about energy costs.

How can I control my costs?

While you don't have control over energy prices, you do have control over your energy use. You can now track your energy use and see how your home heating costs compare online at mge.com. Consider these tips to control costs:

- Adjust your thermostat setting at night and when you are away.
- Replace your incandescent lightbulbs with compact fluorescent bulbs.
- Look for the ENERGY STAR® label when purchasing new appliances and equipment.

What can I do to control my bills?

Sign up for MGE's Budget Payment Plan to spread your energy bills more evenly over a 12-month period. We'll review your account at six and 12 months and adjust your payment amount if necessary.
